

U.S. Embassy Manama

Security Notice 11 – July 2, 2015

Recent terrorist attacks in Kuwait, Tunisia, France, and Egypt serve as a reminder for all to maintain security awareness in the face of continued security threats throughout the region and world. There have been no direct terrorist attacks on U.S. citizens in Bahrain to date, but terrorist activity and violence around the region remain a concern. We strongly recommend you pay close attention to your surroundings, vary your times and routes, and continually exercise the appropriate level of vigilance and security awareness. Terrorist organizations have demonstrated the intent and capability to carry out attacks against Western interests around the world.

There continue to be many reports circulating on social media regarding possible attacks in Bahrain. At this time, however, we do not have specific threat reporting that has been deemed credible and imminent nor do these unsubstantiated reports list U.S. citizens or U.S. facilities as targets. The Ministry of Interior (MOI) is taking prudent measures because of these recent attacks and has issued statements it will increase security countermeasures throughout the country. We expect an increased police presence at malls, markets, and other popular public areas. The Embassy has not, at this time, called for anyone to remain in their homes or to limit travel beyond the areas in the restricted areas. We continue to monitor the situation closely and communicate with Bahraini and partner security services, and will update as necessary.
